“ I remember when I first came to San Antonio in December of 1986, I arrived not knowing anyone in San Antonio. Tony worked at one of the other retail stores in the city and we first met through business conversation on the phone. He really came across as a nice guy and invited me to get together with him and his wife after the holidays were over. I met Tony and Sharilyn at a park where a picnic was being held and there were other friends of theirs that I would meet. I felt so welcomed and we really became good friends. Such good friends that it seemed like I was always at their place every weekend. Tony would grill his famous chicken leg quarters and we would enjoy the time we spent together. Then Tony and Sharilyn had a beautiful baby girl. This little girl loved to eat so much that she was given a nickname. It was always a pleasure to spend time with the Demaios and Jesse and they will be times that will never be forgotten! May you rest in peace good friend and I truly appreciated knowing you and your friendship. Sincerely, Raul.
