

Marjorie Bailey

May 11, 1936 - May 19, 2017

No obituary found for this tribute.

Tribute Wall

“ Marjorie Bailey

October 04, 2023 at 01:12 PM

“ Marjorie Bailey

November 08, 2022 at 06:34 PM

“ I love you x I'll miss you x until I see you again. x

Alexia Bailey - June 28, 2017 at 09:41 AM

KH

“Marjorie was the most beautiful soul anyone could ever hope to know. She was known to most of the kids in her community as grandma cause she treated you like you were one of her own. She was a very proud woman. Proud of her family, her Native American heritage and her crafts. she would make the most beautiful hand crafted jewelry. She was full of wisdom and wonderful stories of her life and experience. Growing up, I loved sitting on her porch listening to her. We could talk all day. At the end of our conversations, I wrap her up in a hug. She loved my hugs. We would give each other kisses on the forehead and she would say " I love you baby girl." It would make her day. I thank her for all the life lessons she taught us kids. I wouldn't be the woman I am today without her guidance and unconditional love. I don't think her little body could carry the big heart she carried. She was a god fearing Christian woman. She loved going to church on Sunday mornings. She would spread love through out her community. She would give you a warm meal and a place to sleep even if you were a total stranger and always gave what she could even if she didnt have much to give. She taught selfless love, compassion and strangth with ever day she lived. Thank god above the world blessed us with a woman like Marjorie. Now she is home spreading her wings like the earths angel she was. I love you grandma. Your adopted granddaughter Katrina

katrina H - June 27, 2017 at 08:25 PM

“She was the best mom a guy could ask for. Mom was very loving, caring, and knew no strangers. I love you mom, rest well.

Harold Bailey - June 27, 2017 at 07:57 PM